OBSERVATIONS BASED UPON THE CENSUS RETURNS FOR SUTTON COLDFIELD 1841-1911

A census is a head count of everyone in the country on a given day. The object of the census initially was not to obtain information about the individuals themselves, but to provide details about the population as a whole.

The Census Act of 1800, also known as the Population Act of 1800, was an Act of Parliament which enabled the first Census of England, Scotland and Wales to be undertaken.

The UK government subsequently took its first national census in 1801. Since then a census has been taken every ten years, except in 1941 because of the Second World War.

The census returns for 1801, 1811, 1821 and 1831 concentrated only upon compiling population figures and inhabited buildings but, in 1841, the first list of names for every individual was obtained, making this the earliest useful census for family historians.

The dates the census returns were taken are, as follows:-

1801 census	March	10th
1811 census	March	27th
1821 census	May	28th
1831 census	May	30th
1841 census	June	6th
1851 census	March	30th
1861 census	April	7th
1871 census	April	2nd
1881 census	April	3rd
1891 census	April	5th
1901 census	March	31st
1911 census	April	2nd

At first glance the census appears to be just a mass of names but, if one drills down more carefully, nuggets of information can be unearthed.

Firstly, a few notes on the various occupations indicated on the census, many of which are rarely used today.

Agricultural Labourer	Performed tasks such as ploughing, harrowing, sowing seed, tending and weeding a variety of crops, threshing and harvesting with scyths, sickle or spade and ditch digging.
Blacksmith	Made objects from wrought iron or steel by forging the metal, using tools to hammer, bend and cut.
Brewer	Prepared beer, using hops, barley, wheat, malt and grain.

OBSERVATIONS (Continued)

Carrier	Responsible for a regular delivery service, delivering goods between towns or villages, usually to a shop or public house.
Carter	Driver of horse-drawn vehicles for transporting goods.
Charwoman	General skivvy, hired to do occasional menial household tasks. She may have worked for several employers and moved from one to the other.
Cobbler	Repaired shoes.
Cooper	Maker of wooden casks, barrels, vats, buckets, tubs, troughs and other similar containers from timber staves, which were usually heated or steamed to make them pliable. Journeymen coopers also traditionally made wooden implements such as rakes, hoes and wooden blades and shovels.
Cordwainer	Made shoes in only the best new Cordovan leather.
Cow Keeper	In the early part of the 19 th century cow keeping was important to the general population. Milk was produced locally and was easily accessible to the consumer. This was necessary, in view of the primitive facilities available for storage. Transporting milk over longer distances was also extremely difficult. Roads were generally in a poor state, being muddy during the winter months and badly rutted in the summer. The milk also became sour very quickly during the warmer periods due to the lack of refrigeration methods. Sometimes the Cow Keeper traded as would any shopkeeper of the time. He sold his product from milk churns over the counter and, at the rear of his shop, stalls where the cow or cattle were housed. A milk cow cost roughly a year's wages for an agricultural labourer. The situation began to change for the Cow Keeper during the 1850's, due to a serious plague outbreak affecting cattle. This brought about a dairy farming review and gradually the small individual operators were forced out by larger combines. Expansion of the railways during this time was the final straw and eventually brought about the demise of this interesting method of trading.
Dressmaker/Seamstress	From the 1840's onwards the growing middle class created a new demand for cheap, ready-made clothing (work undertaken by a bespoke tailor was simply not affordable). Like many trades during this period, tailoring had therefore shifted from unionised labour of skilled males to the cheaper labour of women. To serve this growing market for cheap clothing, many women who were able to sew chose this option rather than go down the route of domestic service. These women might have been young, or sometimes older and widowed, with children and other relatives to support. The type of clothes made were typically shirts, breeches, waistcoats, shifts and petticoats for working people.

Fellmonger

One of the oldest of occupations. The name is derived from 'Fell' meaning skins and 'Monger' meaning Dealer. He was therefore a merchant who sold hides and skins, in particular sheepskin. He also cured and prepared animal skins for tanning.

Groom

Worked in the stables of a Gentleman. There would have been a head groom, with under grooms and a stable boy or two. Their job was to feed, groom and exercise the owner's horses. At times, they might have been required to drive and maintain the carriages.

Grinder

Performed precision grinding processes on metal objects and tools. They ground, sharpened or smoothed metal surfaces.

Journeyman

The title 'Journeyman' came from the historic apprenticeship system. In the past, those starting out in a particular craft or trade would become apprentices to a Master of that specific skill set, often living in the home of the Master, whilst undergoing training. When they had completed their apprenticeship, they would receive papers that declared them 'Journeymen'. They would then be able to set out to practice their trade in their own right.

Laundress

Being a Laundress allowed mothers to work at home and keep their children with them, though they were occupied with washing and ironing from early morning to late at night. The children were often used as unpaid labour to help with tasks such as carrying water, turning the mangle, hanging clothes, etc. The method of working was usually to place the clothing into boiling water to loosen the dirt then agitating them by hand with a washing bat (a 2ft-3ft long wooden paddle). After about 15 minutes in the boiler, the articles were removed to a large basin of warm water to treat any remaining soiled areas with lye soap or other stain treatment. Washboards, which were invented in 1797, would also have been used to scrub the clothes. One can imagine the state of the women's hands, arms and elbows after doing these procedures all day and every day, especially during the colder winter months. They would have become chapped and sore very quickly and they would not have had the option of being able to apply soothing hand creams and lotions, as is the case today!

Letter Carrier	Today's equivalent of a Postman.
Maltster	Prepared malt from various grains, usually to a Brewer's specification.
Needle Woman	Involved mending, embroidering and making clothes. Many women toiled long hours in poor lighting conditions, often to the detriment of their eyesight.
Nurse Child	During the 1800's, the description 'nurse child' was one used for a woman paid to care for it, either by wet-nursing a baby or simply looking after an older infant, the latter meaning a child up to the age of 7 or 8. This practice was very popular amongst the middle and upper classes. In most cases, however, the child would be illegitimate. This would enable the Mother free to find employment and thus earn money to live. Failure to do this would only leave the final option of the Workhouse, which everyone wished to avoid if at all possible. The nearest modern equivalent to the description 'Nurse Child' would be a 'Foster Child'.
Ostler	Tended horses at an Inn. Occasionally an Ostler/Hostler meant the innkeeper himself.
Pauper	A person dependent upon the charity of others. They would either be a recipient of relief under the provisions of the Poor Law, or a public charity, or a person having no property or means of livelihood. Very similar today to describe a person on social benefits.
Plate Layer	Responsible for inspecting and maintaining a railway track and all its component parts, such as rails, sleepers, fishplates, bolts etc. He also greased the points as necessary and looked out for general wear and tear.
Saddler	Made or repaired horses' saddles.
Shoemaker	Made shoes, but not necessarily in the best leathers. He also repaired shoes.
Skinner	Skinned cattle, sheep and pigs.
Spade Tree Turner	Turned wooden handles on a lathe. The handles were subsequently fitted with a metal spade head.

Stonemason

Stonemasonry or stone craft is the creation of buildings, structures and sculpture, using stone as its primary material. A stonemason takes rough hewn pieces of rock or stone and shapes them into the form required.

Wheelwright

Built or repaired wooden wheels for carts, wagons, traps and coaches.

Wire Drawer

Metalworker who draws wire from a coil through a series of dies of decreasing diameter, in order to reduce its size. Many people living in Sutton Coldfield during the 1800's were Wire Drawers. Some would almost certainly have been employed by the Webster family of Penns. Joseph Webster III owned the thriving Wire Mill at Penns and in 1842 he made his 24 year old son his partner in the firm. The son, who bore the unusual Christian name of 'Baron', had returned to Sutton from university three years previously having decided to work in the mill rather than take up a profession. Baron Webster soon entered public life, being chosen as Warden of Sutton Coldfield in 1844. Webster and Horsfall entered into partnership in 1855. Production at Penns and Plantsbrook was abandoned in 1859 and production was transferred to the site at Hay Mills.

1841 Census Return

The rural nature of the town is emphasised by the fact that no fewer than 27 individuals had given their occupation as Agricultural Labourers.

It was interesting to note that a small private school was in operation at the time, run by Thomas Clues, helped by two Governesses and two Assistant Governesses. They had 22 pupils and two female servants. The school was situated next to the Holbeche residence and, until the census return was examined, the writer of this work had no previous knowledge of its existence and had not read about it elsewhere.

It can be seen from the census that the number of occupants living in Church Hill totalled 71. If this figure is divided by the number of houses in the street the average figure was 9 per dwelling. They would therefore have been residing in overcrowded and, most probably, unsanitary conditions.

It can also be established that the area in question was almost entirely made up of innkeepers, shopkeepers and other individual trades people, there being only Thomas Clues, Thomas Holbeche (Solicitor), Miss Mary Shaw (School Mistress), Edward Willoughby (Solicitor), James Packwood (Clergyman), Miss Lucy Riland (Independent Means), Philip Puleston (School Master), Robert Blick (Surgeon), William Felton (School Master) and George Brentnall (Parish Clerk) who could be categorised as anything above a lower class classification.

The days of servants were far from over in the 1840's, as is proved by the fact that there were as many as 50 being employed within the three streets.

For the greater part of the Victorian era (1837-1901) most houses were lit by candles and oil lamps after dark, or simply by the light of the fire.

Two types of candle were mainly used. These were tallow and beeswax. Tallow candles, made from animal fat, were the cheapest but they burnt with a smoky flame and emitted quite an unpleasant smell.

By the end of the century the modern paraffin wax candle was the most commonly used, being cheap, odourless and reliable.

Even the most brilliant minds of the day were constrained by the limited choice of lighting available to them. Most people have heard of the Lunar Society (1765-1813), where the likes of Matthew Boulton, James Watt, William Murdock, Erasmus Darwin, and Joseph Priestley to name but a few, were constrained to hold their regular monthly meeting during periods of the full moon, as the extra light made the journey home easier and safer in the absence of street lighting.

1851 Census Return

In addition to providing name, age and occupation, the 1851 Census Return also listed relationship, condition and where born.

England in the early 19th century was not the greatest place to live and work for the ordinary citizen. Crime, poor sanitation, child labour and overcrowding were rife and these deprivations hung over the country like a dark cloud.

The nation was plagued by an unbalanced power system, in which rich aristocrats had more control in government than the people being affected by the laws being passed.

Low wages, poor diet, insecure employment and the dreaded effects of sickness and old age also had to be endured.

Most of us will have come across at some time or other whilst doing research into family history, someone who would have been described as an 'Ag Lab' or Agricultural Labourer to give the full title. In fact, the 1851 census for the country records that approximately 1.5 million people were working on the land in this capacity or as associated farm servants or shepherds, more than in any other field of employment. Only in 1871 did domestic service overtake this classification to gain top spot.

Sutton continued to be mainly rural and was therefore no different to the rest of the country, as can be seen by the fact that 25 individuals gave their occupation on the census as being in the above category.

The small private school situated close by the Holbeche residence on Coleshill Street was still in existence but under new ownership, Emma Wadhams having taken over from Thomas Clues. The school had been enlarged slightly, with 29 pupils being housed as against 22 in 1841.

Another popular occupation at the time was that of a Wire Drawer. No fewer than eight were categorised under this heading. These men would probably have been employed at Penns Mill where there was a thriving business. More detailed information about their trade has been provided earlier in this work.

This particular census throws up one or two interesting snippets namely:-

A Chelsea Pensioner was currently lodging with the Randle family in Mill Street. As he was born quite close by at Lichfield, he may have been visiting friends or relatives in the area. It is well known that Chelsea Pensioners are based at the Royal Hospital, Chelsea, which is the site used annually for the Chelsea Flower Show.

George Thickbroom, who was also living in Mill Street with his family, was a Gardener by trade, but he doubled up as the Town Crier when the need arose.

Three people were designated as Paupers, which indicates the hardiness of the times.

1861 Census Return

The little private school previously run by Emma Wadhams had now been closed and she was currently living with her husband, a retired farmer, and a family who were lodging with them.

By 1860, work on the branch line extension from Aston Junction to Sutton Coldfield for the London and North-Western Railway was well under way and this was officially opened on the 2nd June 1862.

Evidence of this can be found on the census where there are 7 labourers, 8 railway labourers and 9 excavators all mentioned as living in the three streets. Taking into account Sutton as a whole there would have been many more. Sometimes these were described as 'navvies' and they were the men who actually built the railways. The miles of railway track were laid without the use of machinery, the standard tools being picks, shovels and a wheelbarrow!

Many of them travelled all round the British Isles and when one job had been completed they moved onto the next one. The workers on the census gave their place of birth as diverse as Lancashire and Yorkshire in the North through to the counties of Suffolk and Essex.

Another interesting development was the advent of many Irish workers noted on the census. No fewer than 39 Agricultural Labourers are mentioned in total, the bulk of them being from Ireland.

The reason for their presence was, almost certainly, due to the Irish Potato Famine, which began in 1845. It was caused by a fungus like organism, which attacked the potato crop. It ruined up to one-half of the crop that year and about three-quarters of the crop for the next seven years.

Before the Potato Famine finally ended in 1852, it is estimated, one million of the Irish population died of starvation and related causes, with at least another million forced to leave their homeland.

Take for instance the Hogan family, who had premises in Mill Street. Paul and his wife Mary would have probably come across from Ireland sometime in the late 1840's or early 1850's. They decided to settle in Sutton Coldfield and raise a family. They had five children, all born in the town. He was quite naturally an Agricultural Labourer and he would have been earning quite low wages. In order to increase the family budget, they had taken in no fewer than six lodgers, four of them from Ireland, all of which were also 'Ag Labs'. One can only guess at the conditions which would have prevailed, with a total of 13 occupants living 'cheek by jowl' in what must have been quite a small property. Even then it would have been preferable to the conditions they had left behind in their own country.

A well known Sutton name at the time was Holbeche. In the first census taken in 1841 the head of the family was noted as Thomas Holbeche of Independent Means. He lived at 3 Coleshill Street along with six of his children.

Ten years later in 1851 his son Vincent Holbeche, a Solicitor, was living there with his Wife Emma (some 18 years his junior) with their three sons and three servants.

In 1861, Vincent and Emma are still living in the same property with five of their children, the youngest being Edith just 6 months old. No mention is made of the two sons included earlier namely Thomas Vincent and Edward. There are still three servants looking after their needs, albeit different ones.

The family would continue to have a presence until at least 1891 when the head of the family was Emma by now aged 67. She lived with three of her children Richard (retired Lt. Colonel in the army) aged 40, Emma Gertrude aged 35 and Edith aged 30, both single ladies.

At the time this census was taken a big step forward would have been enjoyed by the townsfolk, due to there being gas lamps in the streets. These became available in 1853 when the Sutton Coldfield Gas Light and Coke Company began producing gas at their works situated at the corner of Riland Road and Coleshill Road. The building is still in existence today albeit in different usage.

Census Return 1871

The layout for this census is arranged differently and somewhat confusingly. Assumptions have to be made to a certain extent, as there is one area simply described as 'Sutton'. Names of individuals living in all three streets are included in this section and have to be segregated.

Church Hill continued to be very populated, with 63 people living in close proximity.

The Hogan family, mentioned in the previous census, remain domiciled in Mill Street, although Mary, Margaret and Catherine have moved out to pastures new. These have been replaced by three younger children named Bridget, Edward and Connor respectively. A large family then, but still not particularly unusual for the times. With 'hand-me-downs' prevalent, one wonders what Connor the youngest got to wear and whether he even had a pair of shoes on his feet!

Two potentially intriguing stories on the census are waiting to be solved, should anyone care to delve a little deeper into the past. The first one is the family of Isabella Hamlin living in Coleshill Street. She is only aged 38 but is already a Widow. She was born in Bristol which, of course, was a major seaport. Was her husband a sailor who died young as a result of a tragedy at sea? It appears he was a New Zealander, as all her five children were born there.

The second story concerns the family of John Perkins, living in Mill Street. His trade was that of a Butcher and he was born in Nantwich, Cheshire. His wife and daughter, however, were American. How on earth did they meet? Were there any discussions involved as to whether John should travel over to America and become an American citizen, prior to his wife and daughter deciding to become naturalised British citizens and how difficult would that have been in 1871?

Census Return 1881

Church Hill remains very overcrowded, with 66 individuals living in eight houses.

Now that the railway had become established in Sutton it had also created jobs, as can be seen by the fact 5 plate layers are mentioned, together with a railway labourer and two railway porters. There is also a coal agent, who I am sure had a thriving business supplying coal for the steam trains running between Sutton and Birmingham. There was also a coal labourer mentioned.

Work on the extension of the railway line to Lichfield was shortly about to begin and this occurred in October 1881. The large influx of Irish labour previously based in Sutton had therefore moved on, as can be seen from the census.

The rural nature of Sutton had now changed, with only 7 individuals putting down their occupation as agricultural labourers.

Charles Beech, who lived in Mill Street, had an unusual occupation. He was described as a Sergeant at Mace. The duty of a Sergeant at Mace is to carry the Mace before the Mayor in civic ceremonial processions and at meetings of the Full Council. He is also responsible for ensuring that, on civic ceremonial occasions and at meetings of the Full Council, the Mayor is appropriately robed and that, on such occasions, all necessary ceremonial robes etc. are available for the Councillors and the Town Clerk. He also ensured that the Mace and all other civic silver were kept in a good and clean condition.

Another person who attracted interest was Joseph Brookes, who was lodging with the Wilkins family in Church Hill. He was a Queen's Messenger. Queen's Messengers were employed by the British Foreign and Commonwealth Office and they carried secret and important documents to various British embassies, high commissions and consulates around the world. Many Queen's Messengers were retired Army personnel. To know what he was doing lodging in Church Hill at the time would have been a fascinating story.

Census Return 1891

There is nothing too remarkable to comment upon in respect of this census except that, perhaps, more occupations relating to the building trades can be observed. This may indicate an increase in activity in the construction of newly built houses in the area. In total, for just the three streets, the following individuals were noted:-

Trade	Total
Bricklayers/Bricklayer's Labourers	8
Carpenters/Joiners	5
Plumbers	2
Painters	8

There also appeared to have been a change in the way labourers were designated. Although ten were included as labourers/general labourers, none were specifically described as agricultural labourers. Was this a change in the criteria for the collection of information or had there been a drastic reduction in people working on the land? The latter reason is probably the case, as the golden age of farming between the 1840's and 1870's had come to an end. Britain was seeing increasing competition from the rest of the world and, as the country had a policy of free trade, it had no protection against the massive imports that were flooding in from America (wheat), Australia & New Zealand (frozen lamb, beef and dairy produce) and Argentina (tinned beef) to name but a few. By 1894, four million arable acres of land and 150,000 agricultural labourers had disappeared.

The well renowned Holbeche family is worthy of another mention at this point in time and, in particular, Richard Holbeche. His name hadn't been seen since the 1861 census, when he was aged ten. On this census he is described as a retired Lt. Colonel and he was back living once more in the family's fine Georgian residence in Coleshill Street, with his widowed mother Emma and his two unmarried sisters Emma Gertrude and Edith.

Richard had not long retired from the Army after 20 years service and had only recently returned to Sutton Coldfield from India. It was during this period of between 1891 and 1893 that he wrote 'The Holbeche Diary'. It was perhaps fortunate that he was home at this time as, in December of the same year, his mother sadly died of bronchitis which affected him greatly.

For a full history of Richard's life and career, please refer to 'Lieutenant Colonel Richard Holbeche' by Janet Jordan, which is held in the Local Studies Section of Sutton Coldfield Library.

Finally, an observation upon the sad and disparaging description of one of Harry Bromwich's sons, John. Harry Bromwich was the Postmaster and lived at the top of Mill Street for many years and must have been well known to the local population. John, however, was noted on the census as an 'imbecile'. Unfortunately, in those days, terms such as imbecile, lunatic etc. were rife and it by no means gave an accurate assessment of the person in question. It could quite easily have been that John was slightly mentally retarded or may even have had Down's syndrome or be Autistic or Dyslectic. The fact that on the 1881 census he was just described as a Scholar and was living at home at the time of the 1891 census and not confined in an Asylum may give a clue to the severity of his condition.

Census Return 1901

A year after the 1891 census was completed; the construction of Shenstone Pumping Station gave Sutton Coldfield its first tapped water supply.

Shenstone Pumping Station

This can still be viewed today, just off Lynn Lane, close to Shenstone Railway Station.

Slightly less than nine months after the taking of the 1901 census, electric lighting became available on the 14th December to the inhabitants of the Royal Town.

This meant, for the first time, that all three utilities were now provided for its citizens, making life so much more amenable.

It is interesting to note how the character of each of the three streets had evolved over the years, since the original census was taken in 1841. In truth, very little had changed in respect of Church Hill which continued to remain very overcrowded, with most of its inhabitants in lowly paid jobs, which meant the families living there were on or only just above the bread line.

Mill Street, for many years, was essentially similar to Church Hill with large families living close together. However, the pattern gradually began to change and, by 1901, the street became more the focus for small businesses. There were three public houses namely, the 'Royal Oak', the 'Gate Inn' and the 'College Arms'. As mentioned earlier, there was a Post Office run by Harry Bromwich and quite a few shops were also springing up which included amongst others:-

Montague Ray	Saddler.
William Birrell	Greengrocer.
Thomas Nickols	Butcher.
William Durant	Newsagent & Stationer.
James Adcock	Hairdresser & Tobacconist.

This trend continued to grow throughout the early part of the 1900's.

Coleshill Street was the most affluent of the three streets, with quite a large number of substantial residences. In addition to the Holbeche family, the following is a selection of some of their near neighbours:-

Name	Occupation	Address
James Fraser	Medical Practitioner	-
George Lloyd	Manufacturing Engineer	'Coleshill Lodge'
Robert Fletcher	Railway Engineering Contractor	'Sandhills'
Henry Jackson	Brick Manufacturer	'Fairfield'
Frederick Rushbrooke	Hardware Merchant	'Highfield'
Rupert Wylde	Wholesale Clothier	'Killiney'
Albert Knowles	Chemical Eng. Manufacturer	'Wyngates'
John Skelton	Owner of Tanning Yard	'The Knoll'
John Keeling	Hardware Manufacturer	'Rockford'
Harry Keeling	Chartered Accountant	"

There was also a small enclave of Commercial Travellers who had established themselves in the street. These would have earned considerable amounts of money by way of commission for selling various products to their respective clientele.

Census Return 1911

The last census to be included in this research is far larger than those that have gone before, with each District running into hundreds of pages. As a result, it is not practical to list the names of residents of Church Hill, Coleshill Street and Mill Street in the same manner as has been done previously. Only information contained in the Summary Books has therefore been included, which does not allow much scope for any meaningful observations.

The only comment of note is that, for the first time, postal addresses have been included in the majority of cases.
